

The Eagle Glen Players Club

Established in 2005, the Eagle Glen Player's Club is open to men, women, and juniors where it seeks to foster camaraderie, competitiveness, and fellowship amongst its members through the participation in golf tournaments, casual play, and social functions throughout the year.

The EGPC is run by volunteers - fellow golfers like you - who love the game and embrace the role of supporting our players club. By working closely with the management of Eagle Glen Golf Club, we feel we have built one of the best player's clubs in the Inland Empire, if not all of Southern California. Our monthly tournaments, played in various formats, over 1 or 2 days, have become very popular with the average number of entrants being 80 plus. If you have a real competitive side, and love match play, we also field a team in the annual SCGA Team Play competition.

The Eagle Glen Golf Club is located in the City of Corona, off the Cajalco exit off Interstate 15. Open since 1999, it has become a favorite of the Inland Empire, as well as all of Southern California. Designed by Gary Roger Baird, the layout will challenge golfers of all levels. The front nine is target-style golf with elevation changes, forced carries, and nice views. The back nine is more of a links-style setup where the wind can play a major role in how you play the course. The greens are large and undulating with particular landing areas.

The course conditions have been greatly improved under the supervision of the new greenskeeper. New tee boxes, brush clearing, bunker re-builds, and hard and fast fairways have all contributed to a better 'Eagle Glen'.

If you are new to the area, belong to another club, or new to 'club golf' in general, then check us out. We welcome newcomers all the time.

The EGPC membership fee pays for itself by virtue of the excellent Membership Package valued at over $300. Join the EGPC, then join us for a round of golf.

Sincerely,

The EGPC Board of Directors
